Vancouver Division had a successful start to the Fall season with a well-attended meeting in the Eastern Fraser Valley. The Chilliwack Curling Club provided a great venue for over 100 members and guests to enjoy a delicious lunch, an inspiring guest speaker, and the chance to reconnect with old friends. The addition of Art Hoivik to the executive team as the EFV representative, along with the efforts of Murray Macham and Social Director Dorothy Martinson, played a crucial role in organizing the successful luncheon. However, the mood turned somber with the tragic loss of Cst. Rick O'Brien, who was murdered in the line of duty on September 22. Members of Vancouver Division actively participated in the Regimental Funeral to honor and remember Cst. O'Brien, acknowledging his exemplary service and expressing condolences to his family. It's a heartbreaking reminder of the risks faced by law enforcement officers in the course of their duties. Cst. O'Brien was remembered as an outstanding member of the RCMP and a loving family man, and his service was honored with gratitude. The Law Enforcement Memorial Weekend in Victoria on September 23 & 24, where Cst. Shaelyn Yang's name was added to the Honour

Roll, is a poignant reminder of the sacrifices made by law enforcement officers. It is unfortunate that Cst. O'Brien's name will be added next year, and we can only hope that his will be the last name to be added to this solemn list.

The end of the year also brings with it, the opportunity to serve on our Division Board of Directors. If you are interested in assisting and taking an active role in the management of the Division, please contact one of our current board members.

I also want to recognize and thank the Support & Advocacy team, including John Sherstone, the Association Co-Chair, and Division Advocates Murray Macham and Alain Duplantie for their dedication and hard work in assisting veterans and their families, as well as serving members of the Force. Their countless hours of support and advocacy have undoubtedly made a significant difference in the lives of many individuals, including veterans who may not even be members of the Association.

Lastly, the Christmas Levee on December 13 at Hazelmere will celebrate the 150th Anniversary of the Force and is a great way to end the year. Dinner meetings provide an excellent opportunity for members, spouses, and guests to socialize and come together to commemorate this significant milestone. More details about the event will be shared in the coming weeks. ♦

The Commanding Officer of E Division released this statement: "It is with a deep and profound sadness that I must advise of the on-duty death of RCMP Ridge Meadows member Cst. Rick (Frederick) O'Brien on Friday 22nd September, 2023. This is an extremely difficult and tragic day for the members of the Ridge Meadows Detachment, Coquitlam RCMP where the incident occurred, and the greater BC RCMP and RCMP family. With respect to what happened, there are a few details we can provide, mindful there are two active investigations underway. I can confirm that at approximately 10:00 am Ridge Meadows RCMP were executing a search warrant on a residence near the intersection of Pine Tree Way and Glen Drive in Coquitlam, British Columbia, where the attending officers became engaged in an altercation with a man which resulted in multiple officers being injured -including our member and the suspect being shot. Emergency Health Services transported all injured to hospital, but our officer did succumb to his injuries at scene. The injured male suspect is in hospital with non-life-threatening injuries. The Independent Investigations Office of BC (IIO BC) is now investigating the incident as it relates to police actions. A concurrent investigation into the homicide of Cst. O'Brien and the injuries to our two other members is also underway and will be conducted by the Integrated Homicide Investigation Team (IHIT). As for our two members. One has been treated for their minor injuries and is with family. The other is still in hospital with non-life-threatening injuries and has family and friends with them". Official notes of condolence were sent by Vancouver Division President Ron Morse and RCMP Veterans National President Sandra Conlin, to Rick's family and his Commanding Officer.

Rest In Peace Constable Rick O'Brien

HISTORICAL CORNERTHE RCMP GUIDON and its HISTORY.

There's much to be written about the Royal Canadian Mounted Police guidon with the organization celebrating its 150th anniversary. This year, the force will consecrate, present and parade a new regimental colour, and lay up its old guidon.

As such, it's a perfect time to reflect on the RCMP's storied past, particularly to edify the many Canadians who aren't aware of the force's service abroad to Crown and country.

The history told through honours received and carried on the force's guidon is exclusive to its actions in theatres of war. The RCMP's extraordinary contributions to international peace operations and United Nations peacekeeping is not included, though that's not to say it doesn't matter—rather that it's not war per se. Anyone who has offered themselves in the service of peace during internecine civil strife and violence knows better.

The RCMP is the only police force in the Commonwealth, if not the world, that is a colour-bearing corps. It proudly possesses a regimental banner that, according to its light cavalry traditions, is known as a guidon; derived from the French word guy d'homme, which means "guide man" in English—the horseman charged with carrying the regimental flag.

The RCMP guidon may be paraded, mounted or dismounted, on occasions consistent with policy and, according to historical convention, it's carried and escorted by the force's sergeants major, the stewards of RCMP regimental tradition.

The force's original guidon was presented during a dismounted parade in the Riding School at Depot, due to inclement weather, in April 1935. The consecration service was conducted by the RCMP chaplain, and the governor general, the Earl of Bessborough, presented it to the force. It bore the RCMP's first four campaign honours.

NORTHWEST CANADA, 1885: The North West Mounted Police (NWMP) was integral to the Northwest Field Force comprised predominantly of Canadian militia that was deployed to the North West Resistance.

SOUTH AFRICA, 1900-1902: NWMP members were drafted into the Canadian Mounted Rifles, while others were selected to form and lead Lord Strathcona's Horse. They were deployed to South Africa with other armed elements of the British Empire to take part in the Boer War. In 1904, due to its record of service in western Canada and South Africa, King Edward VII conferred the Royal title on the force, and it became the Royal North West Mounted Police (RNWMP).

FRANCE AND FLANDERS, 1918: In April 1918, a RNWMP cavalry draft was organized consisting of 15 officers, 768 non-commissioned officers and men. It was deployed to France and Flanders, Belgium, as part of the Canadian Expeditionary Force where most were absorbed into existing cavalry units fighting in the First World War. From within the draft, a squadron comprised exclusively of RNWMP members (four troops consisting of six officers and 151 men) was transferred to the Canadian Light Horse Brigade. It was this group that would later become known as 'A' Squadron, RNWMP.

SIBERIA 1918-19: In August 1918, the Canadian government formed the Canadian Siberian expeditionary Force (CSEF), 16th Infantry Brigade, which was deployed to join with a multi-national force at Vladivostok, Russia, during the Russian Revolution. The Force activated another cavalry draft for the CSEF that became 'B' Squadron, RNWMP.

At the outset of the Second World War, the Canadian government prohibited members of the RCMP from enlisting. It did, however, allow for a "representative unit" from the force to be formed and deployed as part of the Canadian Army. No. 1 Provost Company (RCMP) was formed from volunteers and deployed to England in 1939. It went on to serve in Sicily, mainland Italy and northern Europe, culminating in the liberation of Holland in 1945.

Following the war, the RCMP sought recognition for its overall contributions, particularly the actions of No. 1 Provost Company and its marine section. Instead of a theatre honour, the force was granted an "Honorary Distinction" composed of the badge of the Provost Company, with the dates 1939-45. A formal parade was held on Parliament Hill in September 1955, where the Honorary Distinction was affixed to the guidon by the Minister of National Defence George Pearkes on behalf of Queen Elizabeth II.

Starting to show its wear, the RCMP's first guidon was replaced as part of the force's centennial celebrations in 1973. The current guidon was consecrated and presented at a ceremony conducted on the parade square at Depot Division by the Queen (Queen Elizabeth II) in July 1973. The Honorary Distinction cypher was replaced with a Theatre Honour—Europe 1939-45—deemed more representative of the RCMP's broader contribution to the war effort.

The original guidon was then laid up in the RCMP Chapel at Depot in September 1973 during a church service attended by veterans of No. 1 Provost Company.

Guidon carried by HQ Division Sergeant Major William 'Jock' Taylor, presentation of Provost Corps Honorary Distinction, Ottawa, September 1955.

When the RCMP's new guidon is presented during its 150th anniversary celebrations in 2023, there will be some modifications and additions. There is now also a force policy that prescribes the process and requisite standards to acquire RCMP "Corps Operational Honours." Current and future honours will be reviewed and granted directly by the honorary commissioner in chief of the RCMP, King Charles III.

Chief superintendent (then corps sergeant major) Darren Campbell initiated and led this initiative, with support by superintendent (then sergeant major) Dave Hall. The RCMP Veterans' Association, Mark Gaillard, Dave Muirhead and Graham Muir were also key contributors.

No. 1 Company, Provost Corps, England, 1940.

Corps Sgt. Maj. Al McCambridge brought the work to fruition. The new guidon will include:

The Corps Operational Honour, Second World War 1939-45, which will replace the Theatre Honour, Europe 1939-45, with a much-expanded elaboration of the RCMP's contribution to the war effort.

The Canadian Provost Corps Honorary Distinction, which will be restored.

A new Corps Operational Honour, Afghanistan 2003-14. In Afghanistan, the RCMP played a pivotal role in Canada's whole of government strategic and operational thrust to prevail militarily against a virulent insurgency while concurrently confronting pressing priorities that underpinned the machinery of civil society. The RCMP deployed, enabled and led a cadre of 297 Canadian police officers over the course of the mission, of which 138 were serving members.

As the force looks to the future, one can only imagine what may lie ahead in terms of international engagement. RCMP members and other Canadian police, for instance, have been on the ground in Ukraine for years as part of bilateral arrangements to conduct institutional reform and improve the capacity of Ukrainian police. (Reprinted from Legion Magazine) ♦

Our Membership helping Members and Communities

It seems we, as members and veterans, find it difficult to blow our own horn as helping each other and those within our communities is just what we have all done for years.

With much hesitation, one of our Veterans wrote to me regarding his volunteerism throughout his career which continues as a Veteran. This Vet has been a member of the Association since retiring in 1989 and saw service in BC, the NWT, Yukon and F Division. Many times (especially with the ongoing dialogue of replacing RCMP in various communities and provinces) we often hear that our serving members are not committed to the jurisdictions in which they serve. Rhetoric also suggests that the Force's Veterans did not know the communities in which they served and on it goes. We all know these are not accurate statements as serving members and our Veterans continue to volunteer their time to many organizations and communities throughout Canada.

Within this Veteran's writings, I found that he had spent much time as a cub scout leader, volunteered with the Yukon Territory Transportation Association, the local Junior Chamber of Commerce, read books to children in pediatric wards, served as a Block Parent, helped with school field trips, served 5 on the Parent Teacher' Advisory Committees, helped provide food to inner schools and on it goes. I know this level of volunteerism is no different than what many, many serving members and Veterans have done and are doing within the communities they serve and live.

The Veteran is also helping to keep those who served in northern postings in touch with each other and arranging reunions. He started the website: www.northernite.com and continues to be the webmaster for the site. Further, to help those who served "north of 60" stay in touch, he continues to oversee the website: www.northernnite.com/northerners.htm which contains over 600 names of members who have served in "G", "M" & "V" Divisions.

This is just one example of how our Veterans, and those who continue to serve, are involved within their communities. There are many more examples of how our Veterans volunteered and continue to volunteer in the communities they served and those communities which they now call home.

Thank you, Veteran George Bliss, for sharing. If you have a story about Members helping Members and a Veterans' volunteerism, please send it along to donna.morse@rcmpva.org. Donna Morse Communications Director.

Update received from John Sherstone, Advocacy Director

Just an update on the ADVOCACY area. Last year we assisted with 77 veterans, their widows, and families with various issues. The total for the entire force was 737. There are meetings currently being held in Regina with NPDF as to funding a seminar for the Advocates across Canada as we are now being tasked with assisting those serving members. The Union seems to have dropped the ball in this area (not able to provide this type of service to their members).

*There has been a total of 351 assistance files to serving members across Canada.... To date I have had 36 assistance cases, and I have not checked with Alain. JS
